

Child's responsibilities I will...

✗ Cross out ones that don't apply

Keep to the speed limit.

Not race, skid or do burnouts, even if I've done it heaps of times in video games.

Not drink any alcohol at all (ever), however, especially when I am planning to drive.

Never use my phone while driving.

Replace the petrol I use.*
*With more petrol, not tap water because it's more 'eco-friendly'.

Not take passengers until I have my full licence.*
*This doesn't include the family dog, as long as he wears a seatbelt

Be careful to park legally, even if I'm in a hurry.*
*Unless I use my hazards and dress up like a courier.

Let Mum and Dad know when I arrive at my destination.

Clean the car.

Communicate if I go somewhere different than my agreed destination.

Not eat food while driving.*
*Especially really hot pies, even if I've blown on it

Now appreciate how annoying cyclists can be when cycling two abreast down narrow lanes.

Always raise one index finger in a friendly way to acknowledge road workers and anyone in a small town.

Never compliment another road user on the size of their spoiler.

Never be too cool to point at a group of horses and say loud and clear, "Horses," even if I'm the only one in the car.

Not text message while driving.*
*Or hand write letters, or operate a typewriter or sew flags for the purposes of semaphore.

Report any damage to the car.
*Including emotional damage

Obey all road rules, including the rules about towing.

Wear my seatbelt.

Pay for any chrome spinning mags out of my own pocket money.

Ensure I have insurance excess in my bank account.

Never refer to the family car as 'The Whip'.

Parent's responsibilities I will...

✗ Cross out ones that don't apply

Be available if needed for mechanical difficulties or emergencies.

Stop at stop signs.

Set reasonable consequences if the contract is broken.

Always question the veracity of my child's claims about how long it took them to get places.

DJ when the driver.

Reference the movie Cars to make points about safe driving and the power of friendship.

Give confusing directions even though Google Maps exists.

Stop calling the police names.

Make sure car is roadworthy and legal (WOF/ registration).

If I, _____ breach the terms of this contract, then I agree to the appropriate consequences as decided by my parent(s). These could include but are not limited to:

- Termination of family car privileges
- Limited use of the car
- Full payment of fines, petrol, or parking fees

This contract is between _____ and _____.

Signed _____

Date _____

Signed _____

Date _____